“Surviving Against All Odds”

Walking along a concrete sidewalk one day, I noticed a vibrant, solitary blade of grass shooting out from a crack in the concrete sidewalk. All of the odds were against this blade of grass growing out in such an unlikely habitat.

In like manner, have you ever seen a tree growing out from the side of a rugged cliff? How can this tree survive against all odds and thrive on the side of a stone mountain?

Now, if a blade of grass can grow in a concrete sidewalk and a tree on the side of a mountain cliff, you can, with faith and confidence in an all-powerful God survive all odds this world can throw at you.

Have a blessed week! See you in church Sunday!
